ETERNAL DROPS OF PEACE...

JANEENA PARVEEN
Natural Science (1st year)

The drops of Rain,
that falls from the sky like beads of crystals that brings us joy
when it falls on earth
it gives its aroma
when it falls on us it makes us delighted Raindrops of enthusiasm that smiles with real warmth hangs on the leaves like charming pearls
The drops of rain,
Symbolic of serenity falls from the sky
to unshackle the mind from the thoughts of despair...

sometimes I see it as a straight line drawn with a pencil and a ruler trendsetting the circle of the world.
Or as a singer piercing a smoke - ring, casual, inquisitive But then the sun will come out or the phone will ring and I will cease to wonder.
If it is one thing,
a large ball of air and memory or many things a string of small farming towns a dark road winding through them Let us say it is a field I have been hoeing every day hoeing and singing, then going to sleep in one of its furrows or now that is more than half over a partially open door. rain dripping from the leaves like yours, it could be anything, a nest with one egg a hallway that leads to a thousand room Whatever happens to float - into view When I close my eyes or look out of window for more than few minutes so that some days I think I must be everything and nothing at once.

Wayanad not Wayalnad

LINTA MARIYAGILSE

Wayanad is a small hill District in Kerala with an area of 2131 km². Wayanad District come into being on Nov.1, 1980. It has a population about 9 lakhs of which 90% depend upon agriculture for sustenance. The District has the highest tribal population as well. seven though, in terms, wayanad is derived from the word "Vayal Nad", which means the land of paddy helds. Now it is no more the land of paddy fileds. It is fomous for its spices and coffee plantation now.

In 1980, there were 30,000 hectors of paddy fields in Wayanad. It has shimk by more than 76 percent to 7000 hector at present. The ecosytem and environement of the district, which is famous for its biodiversity is greatly endangered today.

We are facing scarcity to land and water today due to industrilisation and urbanization. this change in defiently affects ecosystem and socio-economic conditions. Hence existing land use and the relationship between population growth and food production is a matter of concern.

Contiues to be staple food of Malayalies, even though food consumption pattern of the majority of households underwent significant changes in past few decades. In these scenario the performance of paddy faim sector in wayanad is quite disappointing. Being a consumer state, with recent production hence, the district and state in general feilds to be moving towards food insecurity.

Agricultural fond convesion especially that of paddy fields, has been a business issue both from the perspective of food security and its enviornmental impacts. Thought agricltural land conversions have been banned under kerala land utilized order, conversion have been occuing in cm unprecdoned manner in wayanad. The major reason for land conversion in wayanad is the pressave from other remuners alive crops like banana, cocount and growth of construction sector. Today fields in wayanad. further many reglected paddy lands have naturally evolved as a dense scrubland. Problems like acute labour shortage, availability of rice for imports from neighbouring states, supply of rice through PDS, change in policy focus of diffecent governeemnts, etc, also affect the decline in the area and production of paddy in Wayanad.

For improving the paddy cultivation in wayanad kerala in general the government should take necessary actions. This includes actions like providing minimum support price for paddy, mechanization of agricultural operation must be done, better irrigation facilities should be provided and most importantly there should be positive change in the general attitude towards rise cultivation. If necessary steps are not taken our district "Wayanad" will no more be a land of paddy fileds as its name suggest.
